OUR ROLE IN SOCIAL RESPONSIBILITY — AND — NATION BUILDING

*Real revival doesn't end on Sunday.
It continues through the week – especially in how we raise the next generation.*

WHY THIS MATTERS

Our calling isn't just to proclaim Jesus but to embody the gospel through responsibility for the common good. When the righteous and believers withdraw from spaces of influence, others step in – often with values that undermine justice and dignity. Key areas we're talking about: government and public service, media and journalism, business and entrepreneurship, education, law and the courts, and community leadership. Rather than lamenting on what's wrong, we must raise people who become part of the solution.

WHAT SCRIPTURE SHOWS US

Scripture gives us powerful examples of believers who served in positions of influence. Each one shows us a different way God can use His people – whether through reforming broken systems or maintaining faithful witness. Look at what these three men accomplished:

JOSEPH

- Reformed Egypt's economic systems
- Created 7-year storage plan
- Saved nations from starvation
- Restructured resource management

NEHEMIAH

- Confronted economic injustice
- Stopped exploitation of the poor
- Cancelled interest on debts
- Returned confiscated property

DANIEL

- Served with excellence without compromise
- Faithful witness in pagan government
- Influenced kings to acknowledge God
- Maintained integrity through regime changes

These men show us different ways God uses His people in positions of influence – from systemic reform to faithful witness.

THE CRITICAL WINDOW: AGES 4 TO 20

This is when conscience and calling take shape. Families and churches can cultivate what I call "holy ambition" – loving Jesus wholeheartedly while loving neighbors practically. We need to help young people see civil service, journalism, legislative, defense, and the judiciary as potential Christian callings. These aren't "secular" spaces – they are places God may send us to.

WHY GROUPS MATTER

Here's the thing: one courageous person standing alone gets isolated and overwhelmed. But a cohort – a group with shared convictions – can reform systems. Imagine dozens of young believers stepping into courtrooms, newsrooms, classrooms, and boardrooms, serving with integrity, skill, and the Holy Spirit's power!

HOW TO START AT HOME

Read and discuss current affairs daily with your children. Navigate the news with curiosity and biblical wisdom. Ask: What happened? Why did it happen? What would godly leadership look like here? Model what you're teaching. Truthful speech. Excellent work. Our children will imitate what they see us do far more than what we say. Over four or five years, these small practices shape moral imagination. Your prayers begin to shift – from "God, remove this problem" to "Lord, raise up workers for the harvest."

THINK LONG-TERM

If those who are now 10 to 15 years old are equipped to take responsibility where God directs them, we could see real change as they reach adulthood. That five-year-old sitting in our congregation... at twenty years from now could be looking at a different nation.

Scripture calls us to run with purpose and endurance, to fix our eyes on Jesus, and to finish our race with faith. Let's build a pipeline – generation after generation – of informed, courageous, compassionate leaders.
